16.4 Tax regulations in Poland

There are numerous regulations in force in Poland regarding tax on goods and services, corporate income tax and social security contributions. Tax regulations are subject to frequent changes, and the resulting ambiguities make it necessary to interpret the law. Differences in opinions as to the interpretation of regulations, both within tax authorities and between state authorities and taxpayers, may result in creating areas of uncertainty and disputes.

Tax settlements and other areas of activity subject to the regulations of, for example, customs or foreign exchange control, may be the subject of inspection by the relevant authorities that are authorized to impose penalties and sanctions together with penalty interest. As a result, the level of tax risk in Poland may be higher than in countries with a more developed tax system. Tax settlements may be inspected for a period of five years from the end of the calendar year in which the tax payment deadline expired.

34. Continuation of operations

The Management Board of the Company foresees no threat to the continuation of operations.

35. Objectives and principles of financial risk managementa) Credit risk

The company is exposed to credit risk due to the nature of its business, ie. granting short-term loans that are not secured. This mainly consists in the risk that a borrower does not repay all or part of their liabilities on time. The company minimizes this risk by lending small amounts for short periods to diversified customers. The company has an internal model for assessing the credibility and creditworthiness of customers. The scoring system used makes the amount of the loan granted and the repayment period dependent on many parameters. Loans are granted to customers who, in the opinion of the Company, are able to repay them. Credit risk in relation to amounts due from customers is in line with the business model adopted by the Company. The company periodically reviews the loan amount limits and takes steps to minimize losses due to customer insolvency. First and foremost, the Company monitors the quality, structure and dynamics of the loan portfolio and takes action when certain parameters differ from expectations.

b) Liquidity risk

The liquidity risk results from a situation where the Company may have difficulty paying its liabilities. Due to the nature of the business and the need to constantly monitor the amount of financial assets held, the Company is exposed to this type of risk. The Company manages liquidity by providing cash in the amount sufficient to cover anticipated expenses and liabilities, mainly resulting from customer demand for loans. The company strives to have such a degree of financial liquidity that is sufficient to settle liabilities in normal and crisis situations, without exposure to losses. For this purpose, the Company monitors cash flows and makes forecasts of customers' lending activity.

c) Market risk - the risk of price changes

Due to the nature of its lending activities, the Company is exposed to the risk of changes in market prices, resulting from changes in interest rates, prices of equity instruments, changes in legislation and regulations. The purpose of managing this type of risk is primarily to control the degree of the Company's exposure to market risk within the accepted limits. At the same time, the Company aims to optimize the rate of return on its activities.

d) Interest rate risk

The company is not significantly exposed to the risk of changes in interest rates. The Company assesses the interest rate risk in relation to overnight transactions and deposits as low, while the interest rates on loans granted to customers show a low degree of variation. The company does not protect itself against changes in interest rates.

(all figures shown in PLN)

e) Currency risk

The company is minimally exposed to currency risk related to purchase transactions in foreign currencies, mainly in EUR. Due to the insignificant value of these transactions, the company does not apply any hedging related to currency risk. The company does not use any hedging related to forward currency risk. The company strives to optimize currency transactions by applying the "leading and lagging" method, ie accelerating or delaying currency transactions depending on the Company's expectations as to the value of the domestic currency and the increase in the value of the foreign currency.

Statutory auditor responsibility for the audit of the financial statements

Our objectives are to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements as a whole are free from material misstatement due to fraud or error, and to issue an audit report that includes our opinion. Reasonable assurance is a high level of certainty, but it does not guarantee that an audit conducted in accordance with the NSA will always detect an existing material misstatement. Misstatements may arise from fraud or error, and is considered material if, individually or in combination, it can be reasonably expected to influence economic decisions of users taken on the basis of these financial statements.

The scope of the audit does not include the assurance as to the future profitability of the Company or the effectiveness or efficiency of conducting its affairs by the Management Board of the Company now or in the future.

When auditing under the NSA, we use professional judgment and maintain professional skepticism, as well as:

- we identify and assess the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error, we design and perform audit procedures responsive to those risks, and obtain audit evidence that is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our opinion. The risk of not detecting material misstatement due to fraud is greater than that due to error because fraud may include collusion, forgery, willful omission, misrepresentation or the circumvention of internal audit;
- we obtain an understanding of internal audit relevant to this audit in order to design auditing procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the Company's internal audit;
- we assess the appropriateness of the applied accounting principles (policy) and the validity of accounting estimates and related disclosures made by the Company's Management Board;
- we draw a conclusion on the appropriateness of the application by the Management Board of the Company of the going concern principle as the basis for accounting and, based on the audit evidence obtained, whether there is a material uncertainty related to events or conditions that may cast significant doubt on the Company's ability to continue as a going concern. If we conclude that there is a material uncertainty, we are required to draw attention in our auditor's report to related disclosures in the financial statements or, where such disclosures are inadequate, we modify our opinion. Our conclusions are based on the audit evidence obtained up to the date of our auditor's report, however, future events or conditions may cause the Company to cease as going concern;
- we evaluate the overall presentation, structure and content of the financial statements, including disclosures, and whether the financial statements represent the underlying transactions and events in a manner that ensures fair presentation.
